6. Some general Australian Public Service (APS) matters

Eligibility for employment in the APS

General

Your employment is subject to you meeting the required standards relating to character and background checking. The relevant checks will be done within the first three months of employment.

Australian citizenship

An Agency Head may only engage a person who is not an Australian citizen as an APS employee if the Agency Head considers it appropriate to do so. If you are selected for interview and you are not an Australian citizen, you must let the selection committee know.

OPC's policy is that jobs in OPC will be filled by people who are Australian citizens, or certain non-citizens who intend to become Australian citizens.

FPC may consider it appropriate to employ a non-citizen, as an ongoing or non-ongoing employee, if the non-citizen is a permanent resident and the non-citizen:

- (a) is an outstanding applicant for the position; or
- (b) is the only person found suitable for the position; or
- (c) if several positions are being filled—is suitable for one of the positions and the number of positions exceeds the number of citizens who have been found suitable.

If OPC engages a non-citizen who is a permanent resident, the person's engagement is conditional upon becoming an Australian citizen within a specified time after commencing employment in OPC. Normally the specified time is 6 months, however, FPC will consider the circumstances of the non-citizen, and the person's eligibility for Australian citizenship, when determining the specified time in which the person is to become an Australian citizen.

A person who, while not a permanent resident, has a right to live and work indefinitely in Australia, may also be engaged in the circumstances set out above. If OPC engages such a person, the person's engagement is conditional upon becoming a permanent resident within a specified time after commencing employment in OPC and becoming an Australian citizen within a specified time after becoming a permanent resident. FPC will consider the circumstances of the non-citizen, and the person's eligibility for permanent residency and Australian citizenship, when determining the specified time in which the person is to become a permanent resident and an Australian citizen.

If you have recently received a redundancy payment

There is a prohibition (exceptional circumstances can apply) on the engagement as an ongoing APS employee of a person who has received a redundancy benefit from the APS or the Parliamentary Service Department and whose redundancy benefit period has not elapsed.

If you have received a redundancy benefit that may fit the criteria above, include the information in your application.

Security clearances

OPC staff have access to material that is classified in the interests of national security or is otherwise sensitive. Your employment is subject to you obtaining a security clearance to the Baseline level within the first 6 months of employment. The contact officer can give you information about how this is done.

Probation

Engagement of an APS employee is usually made on probation. Employment on probation enables your conduct and work to be assessed to determine your suitability for continued employment.

APS Values, Employment Principles and Code of Conduct

The APS Values and APS Employment Principles, contained in sections 10 and 10A of the Public Service Act 1999, are important to the way in which all staff perform their work in OPC. The APS Values, APS Employment Principles and the Code of Conduct (contained in section 13 of the Public Service Act 1999) are not simply aspirational statements of intent. All APS employees are required to uphold the APS Values and APS Employment Principles and comply with the Code of Conduct. A copy of the APS Values, APS Employment Principles and the Code of Conduct is attached to this document.

The APS Values are designed to:

- (a) provide the philosophical underpinning for the APS; and
- (b) reflect public expectations of the relationship between public servants and the Government, the Parliament and the Australian community; and
- (c) articulate the culture and operating ethos of the APS.

An equal opportunity employer

The Australian Public Service values and promotes equal employment opportunity, and the filling of a vacant position within OPC will be determined solely on the basis of merit.

Diversity in the workplace

The Australian Public Service values and promotes Workplace Diversity.

Workplace Diversity requires that people from diverse backgrounds are not disadvantaged in competing for Australian Public Service careers. It also recognises the positive contribution that a diverse workforce can make to organisational effectiveness.

Smoke-free workplace

OPC promotes a smoke-free workplace.

7. What happens after you apply

The selection committee

The selection process will be conducted by a committee made up of two or three members. The committee is responsible for advertising the position, conducting the selection process and making a report to the First Parliamentary Counsel.

Interviews

If you are selected for an interview, you will be given a couple of days' notice before you are required to attend the interview. If you are unable to attend the interview at the scheduled time, it may be possible to organise another time.

Before the interview, you should familiarise yourself with OPC's work. You can do this by obtaining a copy of our Annual Report and OPC's drafting services: A guide for clients. Both are available on our website and can be sent to you on request.

At the interview, you will be asked questions relating to the functions of the job and your skills, knowledge and experience. You can prepare for the interview by thinking about questions that may be asked by the selection committee and how you could answer them.

It is important that you are able to talk about the skills, knowledge and experience on which you have based your application. The selection committee makes its decision on referee reports and on material presented by you in your written application and at the interview. It is up to you to convince the selection committee that you are the best person for the job.

At the interview, you will be given the chance to ask questions about the job. Questions about general conditions of employment (salary, leave, etc.) can also be asked at the interview. You can find a summary of the conditions of employment on our website, and a copy can be sent to you on request.

The selection committee may contact persons you have named as referees, and other persons whom it thinks are appropriate, to assist it in making a decision, to confirm its impressions of you or to confirm information provided by you.

The committee's recommendation

After all the applicants who were selected for interview have been interviewed, the selection committee will make a recommendation to First Parliamentary Counsel about the applicant the committee considers is the best person for the job. If First Parliamentary Counsel approves the committee's recommendation, an offer of employment or promotion will be made to the recommended applicant. If the offer is accepted, all other applicants will be advised that they were unsuccessful in applying for the job. If the recommended applicant does not accept the job, other applicants who were ranked as suitable may be offered the job in order of ranking.
